

ABOUT US

For over thirty years the Children's Leukaemia & Cancer Research Foundation (Inc) (CLCRF) has been raising funds for research into childhood cancers.

The creation of the Foundation was inspired by nine year old Jennifer Harper, who was diagnosed with leukaemia in 1977. When her father, Peter Harper, discovered that there was no research into children's leukaemia being done in Western Australia, he set out, together with other parents of children with cancer, to raise funds for this purpose. Sadly Jennifer passed away in 1978.

Thanks to invaluable and vital research over this time what was a very poor prognosis for children with some cancers has now greatly improved, many can now expect a survival rate of approximately eighty percent.

CLCRF has a commitment to ensure this ground-breaking research continues so that the future generations will be the ones to live cancer free. The Foundation relies on the generous support of the community to continue its vital research, as we do not receive State or Federal funding.

You will be remembered

We appreciate that family and loved ones always come first when it comes to considering your Will. After ensuring that this is the case, you might also consider leaving a gift to the Children’s Leukaemia & Cancer Research Foundation as a lasting legacy.

WHILE times are tough and Australians feel the ripples of the economic downturn, many are forced to make the difficult decision that charity begins at home...

But fortunately, finding yourself strapped for cash now does not mean that you cannot generously help good causes of your choice in the future.

Making a Bequest, in your Will, allows you to give support to your favourite charities beyond your lifetime, and ensures that there is a legal document outlining your wishes.

You can leave money, property or a percentage of your estate after your death; and with it your stamp on the future. The gift provides crucial funding to allow the likes of the Children’s Leukaemia & Cancer Research Foundation to continue their vital work.

When you make a Bequest, you can have peace of mind that you will, one day, be supporting the organisation whose work you believe in and will enable our important research to continue. Anyone can leave a Bequest, however large or small. If you have considered joining the 10,000 Australians who have already exercised their free ‘Will’ and chosen to Bequest, the good news is that the process is relatively quick and easy.

Your solicitor will gladly give you advice on making provision for the Foundation in your Will OR you can contact the Public Trustees Office on (08) 9222 6777 for assistance.

If you intend remembering the Children’s Leukaemia & Cancer Research Foundation (Inc) in your Will, we recommend the following legal wording be used:

“I give to the Children’s Leukaemia & Cancer Research Foundation (Inc) the sum of $..... to assist with research into childhood leukaemia and cancers.”

Bequests can be anonymous but letting your charity know of your kindness allows them to make plans for the future, assist you with wording the Bequest and thank you personally.

Making a Will should give you peace of mind that comes from planning ahead for those you care for - and children with cancer.

Your Bequest

If you have made a bequest to the Children’s Leukaemia & Cancer Research Foundation Inc. or would like more information about remembering CLCRF in your Will, please contact us.

- I am thinking about remembering CLCRF in my Will and would like to be contacted for a confidential discussion about my Will, or about giving a gift to CLCRF in my lifetime.
- I would like further information about CLCRF.
- I have already made provision for CLCRF in my Will and wish to have this noted.
